Reconciliation
ACTION PLAN
INNOVATE RAP

Director General's foreword

The Department of Training and Workforce Development recognises Aboriginal people as the original custodians of Western Australia, and is firmly committed to celebrating their rich cultural heritage.

We embrace the spirit of reconciliation and look forward to working in partnership with Aboriginal people to implement the actions contained in the Reconciliation Action Plan.

The Department is already strongly engaged in providing services that assist Aboriginal people to gain vocational skills and qualifications, and participate fully in the Western Australian workforce. This is an important contribution to 'closing the gap' between Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal people.

We will aim to further strengthen recruitment, retention and career development opportunities for Aboriginal employees of the Department, as well as encouraging greater participation of Aboriginal-owned businesses in tendering opportunities.

The development of this plan has been a valuable experience for the Department and its implementation provides a real opportunity to help deepen relationships and respect between Western Australia's Aboriginal community and the vocational education and training sector in this State.

Our business

Core business

The Department of Training and Workforce Development supports the State of Western Australia's sustained economic expansion by leading and coordinating workforce development strategies and driving a responsive, flexible training system within a State and national framework.

Total staff numbers

529 people (as at November 2013).

Aboriginal staff numbers

15 Aboriginal people (2.8% as at November 2013).

Geographical reach

The Department's reach covers the whole of Western Australia, while recognising the challenges of a dispersed population including remote settlements. We also contribute to the national agenda in training and workforce development.

Our Reconciliation Action Plan

- The Department of Training and Workforce Development (formed in December 2009) considers it important to develop a Reconciliation Action Plan as a measure of respect towards Australia's first peoples and to reflect its role in improving the position of Aboriginal people in the Western Australian workforce.
- The Reconciliation Action Plan has been developed under the authority of the Corporate Executive, with the process being led by the Executive Director, Service Delivery.
- The pre-existing Aboriginal Workforce Development Internal Stakeholders Group has delegated responsibility to the Reconciliation Action Plan Working Group, with input and advice from the Internal Aboriginal Employees Reference Group. The Reconciliation Action Plan Working Group consists of both Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal members.
- Development of the Reconciliation Action Plan is a measure of one of the initiatives under the Department's Workforce Plan (item 6.5).

Relationships

One of the Department's strategic goals is to increase the workforce participation of disadvantaged groups. It is important for the Department to build strong relationships so that Aboriginal people are involved in a meaningful way, in the planning and implementation of training and workforce development services that aim to meet their needs. In addition to the full suite of training and workforce development services supported by this agency, key Departmental programs that aim specifically to assist Aboriginal people include:

- Aboriginal Workforce Development Centres
- Aboriginal Training and Employment Program
- Aboriginal School Based Training Program
- Workforce Participation and Equity Program (program to be replaced by Participation Program in 2014)
- Aboriginal Education Workers in WA prisons
- State Training Provider Delivery and Performance Agreements (Aboriginal Training Plans and Aboriginal Program Funding)
- State Training Provider Aboriginal Education, Employment and Training Committees
- Support for Aboriginal independent training providers
- Language/literacy programs

It is important for the Department to build strong relationships so that Aboriginal people are involved in a meaningful way, in the planning and implementation of training and workforce development services.

Relationships within the Department

Respect

Appreciation of and respect for Aboriginal history, heritage, language and cultures are central to reconciliation and underpin the development of strong relationships of trust between Aboriginal people and other Australians. As Aboriginal people are a significant part of the Department's client group, it is essential that staff and contracted service providers understand and respect the strengths of Aboriginal cultures and the contributions that Aboriginal people can and do make to our core business. Aboriginal Workforce Development Centres play a unique role in this regard. The Department inducts all new staff and currently includes a brief mention of cultural awareness in the induction program. All staff members are offered the opportunity to undertake one-day (short) or two-day (intensive) cultural awareness training courses.

9. Engage employees in cultural learning to increase understanding and appreciation of different cultural backgrounds in order to lay the foundation for other Reconciliation Action Plan actions to be achieved.	Director, Human Resources	Ongoing December 2014	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Cultural awareness training (short course) will be offered to all Department staff three to four times per year and all staff encouraged to attend. Options will be investigated for providing intensive cultural awareness training relevant to the local area to all non-Aboriginal staff whose work involves close contact with Aboriginal people as well as to Aboriginal staff who work closely with non-Aboriginal people – including staff in regional offices. All staff will be encouraged to complete the WA Public Sector Commission online course in Cultural Competence.
10. Provide opportunities for Aboriginal employees to celebrate their cultures and engage with their community through NAIDOC Week and other culturally relevant events.	Director, Human Resources	July 2014	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Aboriginal employees are encouraged and permitted to participate during working hours in local Sorry Day, Reconciliation Week and NAIDOC Week events. Regularly (at least once a year) via Communications and Marketing remind managers that Aboriginal staff should be supported to attend key cultural events within working hours, without needing to take leave.
11. Promote awareness among Department staff and the wider Vocational Education and Training sector of linguistic/dialectal differences that can affect communication between Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal people.	Executive Director, Policy, Planning and Innovation	December 2014	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Conduct three workshops for key target audiences.

Opportunities

Improving employment opportunities for Aboriginal people across the Western Australian economy is a key aspect of the Department's core business, as set out in Skilling WA – A workforce development plan for Western Australia, chapter 1 – Increasing workforce participation, both as a matter of equity and to help address the State's workforce needs. Under the State Government's Training Together – Working Together Aboriginal Workforce Development Strategy, five Aboriginal Workforce Development Centres have been established in Perth and four regional centres. These centres 'join the dots' so that Aboriginal job seekers, employers and service providers are better linked to achieve employment outcomes.

Through the Training Together – Working Together Aboriginal Workforce Development Strategy, the Department has a role in supporting employers to engage and retain Aboriginal workers. It's therefore important that our own Aboriginal employment policies and practices represent best practice. It is also important for the sake of our potential Aboriginal clients that we have Aboriginal staff at all levels of the Department who understand the key issues facing Aboriginal people and who can help ensure that the needs of Aboriginal people are adequately addressed.

The Department currently procures services from Aboriginal suppliers wherever appropriate and feasible. The Department has also played a role in supporting the success of Aboriginal-owned businesses by co-sponsoring, in partnership with the Department of Indigenous Affairs, the Small Business Development Corporation and the Chamber of Commerce and Industry of Western Australia (through its 'Project Connect'), the development of the WA Aboriginal Business Directory which was launched in October 2012. Recent changes to State Government procurement guidelines will allow the Department to purchase services directly from businesses listed in the WA Aboriginal Business Directory where the value is less than $150,000.

Kevin currently resides in Canning Vale, Perth. He has been painting for over 12 years and has his paintings hanging on walls in all parts of the world. He started off with drawings but then with the realisation that the stories he's been told over the years could be interpreted through paintings, he turned to the brush and paint. Through comments from admirers of his work and buyers, both nationally and internationally, they inspire Kevin to continue to paint and be creative. But more importantly, he loves how the stories are told through his paintings to not only teach, but also create awareness for his culture.
