

FACT SHEET

Training contract and exemption notices for children of compulsory school education age

In Western Australia, if a child of the compulsory school education age wishes to enter into a training contract, additional requirements need to be met.

This fact sheet explains the requirement relating to exemptions. The diagram on page 3 of this fact sheet outlines the relevant requirements and details of the supporting documentation needed, if applicable.

An exemption in accordance with section 11 of the School Education Act 1999 permits a child to pursue an alternative option to full time schooling or full time home education such as an apprenticeship or traineeship. The child's parent/legal guardian must apply for the exemption, and approval can only be granted by the Minister for Education and Training (or delegate) if it is in the child's best interests to do so.

For children in year 10 or earlier, an approved exemption must be submitted with the training contract in order for the Department of Training and Workforce Development Apprenticeship Office to register the training contract.

Exemptions are generally not needed for children who will be commencing the training contract in year 11 or later.

Exemption for students enrolled at non-government schools

The Exemption application form for non-government school students must be signed by all relevant parties, including the principal of the non-government school the child is attending, before being sent to the following address for approval by the Director General of the Department of Education.

Department of Education
PO Box 1766
OSBORNE PARK WA 6916

Exemption for students enrolled at public schools or home education

Advice must be sought from the education regional office (or the child's school principal if the child attends an independent public school). Exemptions are approved by regional education directors, or principals of independent public schools.

Exemptions for students from interstate or overseas

The process for children who are from interstate or overseas who have not attended a school in WA and are still of compulsory school age is the same as that for public school students.

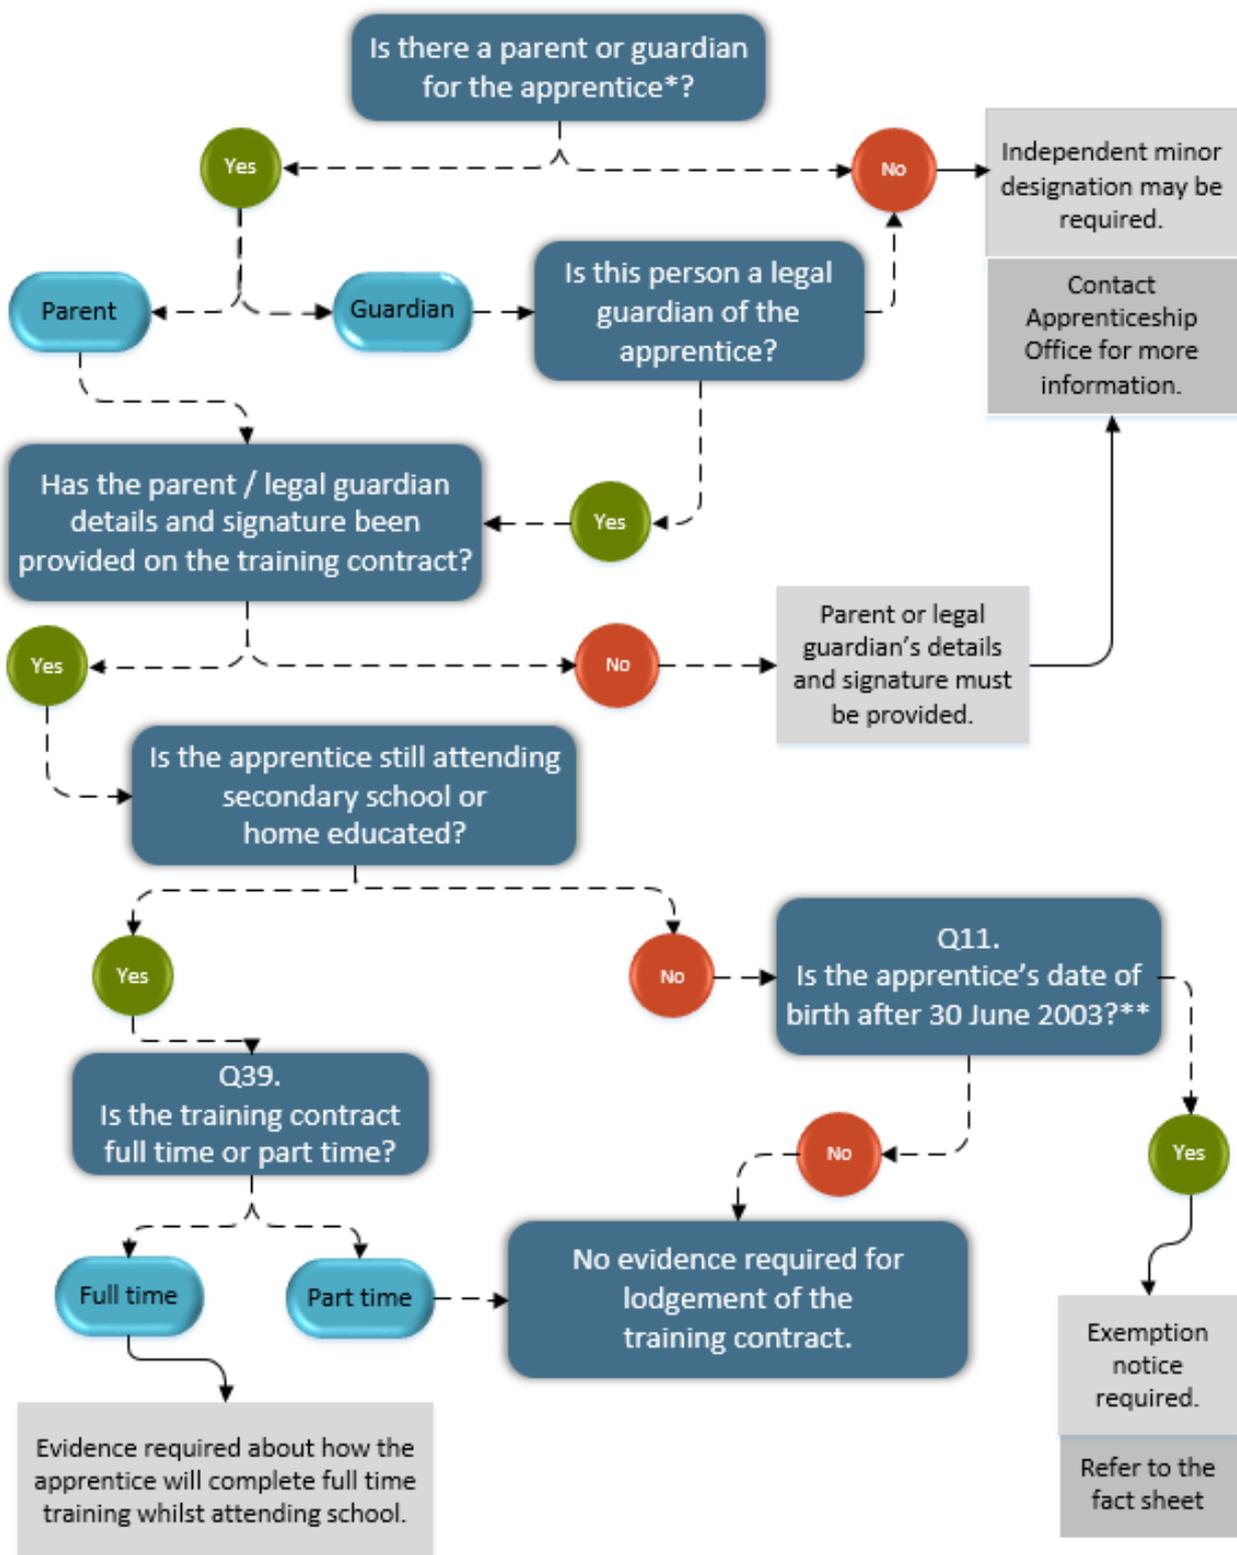

Approval of exemptions

An approved exemption notice has an exemption application outcome section. Check that this is marked as "approved" and signed by the relevant endorser as stated above.
